Hugh J. Addonizio was born and raised in Newark. He attended West Side High School and St. Bede's Prep. As an All-State quarterback, Addonizio went on to Fordham University where he played with the football team that included the famed Seven Blocks of Granite.

Upon hearing the call to arms in 1941, Addonizio was one of the first in the nation to enter the Armed Forces. He rose to the rank of Captain and during those five treacherous years of World War Two, he won eight major campaign ribbons. His gallant service record has earned him a place in the United States Hall of Fame, Ft. Benning, Ga.

In 1948, he won a seat in the United States Congress from the 11th District, a post which he held for fourteen consecutive years before making his successful bid for Mayor of the City of Newark.

He was elected Mayor of Newark on May 8, 1962 and reelected to that office on June 14, 1964. He brought to the Mayor's Office a wealth of experience in urban affairs gained in Washington. He has produced a series of model anti-poverty programs; stimulated urban renewal activity; emphasized development of the meadowlands for long-term growth and tax relief; initiated the first formal capital improvements program for city schools and public works; developed a nationally-hailed network of work training and job development programs; expanded residential housing and equal job opportunities; and raised the pay of policemen, firemen and school teachers to the highest in New Jersey and among the highest in the nation.

Married to the former Doris Goodheart, the Addonizio's have four sons and two daughters and live at 68 Hazelwood Avenue.

Councilman-at-large Anthony J. Giuliano, who is seeking re-election, is a lifelong resident of Newark and resides at 297 Clifton Ave. with his wife.

Giuliano attended local schools in Newark, graduating from Barringer High School.

The candidate was elected to the City Council on November 5, 1968, to fill an unexpired term. Prior to joining the municipal government, Giuliano was a Newark policeman for 21 years.

The councilman is past president of the Newark Police Athletic League (PAL), past president of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, Columbia Association Police and Fire Division, and of the Grand Council New Jersey State Columbia Association.

Since his election to the City Council, Giuliano has concentrated on increased state and federal aid to provide needed funds for the city. He lobbied in Trenton for the successful passage of the Urban Aid Bill.

The councilman has also called for a complete review of all tax exempt properties in Newark, claiming that 61 per cent of the land area in the city is tax exempt.

Giuliano sees crime and taxes as the two big issues in this campaign and has pledged to continue efforts to provide more effective enforcement in combating the elements of crime as well as lobbying for more state and federal aid.

He also proposes expanded recreation facilities for senior citizens; a city-wide program for vest pocket play areas for youngsters; more day nurseries for the convenience of working mothers; improved health and sanitation codes, and a 24-hour bus service on major thoroughfares for people working late shifts.

Councilman-at-large Calvin D. West was the first Negro to hold that office in Newark's 300 year history.

West, who lives with his wife Rita and daughter Carla at 358 Ridgewood Avenue, was born and raised in Newark. He received his education at South Side High School, Bloomfield College and Cooper Union College.

His political activities began in 1954 when he formed the Central Ward Young Democrats, which he served as president for seven years. He was also treasurer of the Essex County Young Democrats for four years.

He is presently director of the Carlton B. Norris Youth Association and a volunteer physical education instructor at St. Charles Borromeo School.

Before his election to the City Council, West worked as auditor to the Division of Local Government in Newark and for the State Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

West is vice-chairman of the Newark Municipal Utilities Authority, a Newark Senior Citizens Commissioner and member of the Insurance Fund Commission.

He is a parishioner at St. Charles Borromeo Roman Catholic church and a member of its Holy Name Society, as well as the NAACP, the American Cancer Society and the Bloomfield Booster Club.

West is campaigning on his record at City Hall under the administration of Mayor Hugh J. Addonizio. And is credited with helping to implement the programs of the United Community Corporation, the Total Employment and Manpower organization, Model Cities and the Emergency and Disaster Center in Newark.

Michael A. Bontempo was born, raised and educated in Newark. He is married, has two married children, and resides at 43 Richelieu Place.

A former Newark detective, Bontempo took a leave from the department in 1964 to launch a successful race for the city council, after 25 years of active duty. He was reelected for two consecutive terms.

From 1958 to 1962 he served as council president and has held the county post of secretary to the Essex County supervisor.

He wants "more and better street lighting," more foot patrolmen and more police precincts. One precinct should be built in the North Ward, he says, and one in the Vailsburg area of the Police and Fire Academy. The Academy, he says, could be moved to vacant land near the airport.

On urban renewal, Bontempo says there should be "more cranes and fewer bulldozers." He believes that vacant land should be cleaned up and garden apartments built. The city should "bring back beauty," he says.

Transportation in Newark should be improved, Bontempo says, by building a monorail from the airport to Pennsylvania Station, and making Springfield Ave. an express highway from the Court House to the Irvington line with federal funds.

Bontempo advocates tax exemptions for the senior citizens and the disabled, inducing business to stay in Newark, and making "an all out" effort to get new business to come into the city.

"The narcotic situation should be controlled under the supervision of the local, county, state and federal authorities jointly," he says.

Ralph A. Villani, seeking re-election to the city council, is married and has one daughter.

He is a native of Elizabeth, having moved to Newark's Ironbound Section when he was two.

He currently resides at 586 Parker St.

A graduate of Lafayette St. School and East Side High School, Villani received a bachelor of laws degree from Syracuse University and was awarded the Phi Delta Phi honorary key.

He served his clerkship and began practicing law in the office of Phillip J. Schotland. He was admitted to the bar in 1924.

Newark Police Magistrate from 1933 to 1937, he was elected city commissioner in 1941 and served as head of the Department of Parks and Public Property until 1949.

In this capacity, Villani was responsible for the beginning of the "Learn to Swim Campaign," and was also instrumental in implementing a program of planting 30,000 trees in the city.

In 1949, Villani was elected mayor.

He was first elected councilman-at-large in 1962, when he was appointed president of the council. He was re-elected to the council in 1966 and still serves as its president.

He was also elected supreme governor of the Loyal Order of the Moose of the World for 1957-58.

While Villani was a communicant of St. James Church, he presently attends Our Lady of Good Counsel Church.

Villani is also co-founder of a yearly retreat at the Loyola House of Retreats in Morristown.
